About Blood Bank Refrigerators

The demand for blood products is likely to grow during the forecast period due to an increase in the incidence of diseases in the US, which is home to the fastest growing elderly population. This might escalate the number of chronic and age-related diseases, necessitating an increase in blood transfusion as a part of treatment. This has made it indispensable for hospitals and diagnostic centers to employ highly specialized refrigeration equipment to ensure the proper preservation and storage of blood units, which can be made immediately available for transfusion or research purposes. Considering the lack of an adequate supply of blood in the US, organizations such as the American Association of Blood Banks have set stringent guidelines to ensure appropriate storage and supply, thereby forcing end-users such as blood banks and hospitals to use highly efficient cold storage systems to store blood units.

Technavio’s analysts forecast the blood bank refrigerator market in the US to grow at a CAGR of 5.79% during the period 2017-2021.
